ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S DEED.

Maj. J. M. Lucas, one of the prominent citizens of Jacksonville, Ill., and who was killed at the battle of Vicksburg, is now in Europe, where he has been assigned his position as United States Consul at Tientsin, England. Lucas is the only man now living who was an eye-witness of the alleged duel between Mr. Lincoln and Gen. Shields, across the Mississippi river at Alton, in 1842. The details of the duel are almost forgotten. "A fair of the past, where, as he says, though he is rather reluctant to call it a duel, it should be buried. The alleged Lincoln going to the duel armed with a broadsword to fight with the other days so inconsistent with the character that many have doubted the authenticity of the story. Lucas is a very disreputable man, says Maj. Lucas, who rode down to the spot, and was there when the affair was amicably settled."

The challenge of Shields arose out of a political newspaper article which was written by the sister of Mrs. Lincoln, who wielded a peppery pen. Lucas says such offense to Gen. Shields was sent to the editor and demanded to know who the writer was. The editor of the paper was in a hurry, and, meeting Lincoln on the street, asked him what he had better do. "Oh," said Lincoln, "just tell him that it was me." The editor did so, and Shields sent a challenge to Lincoln, who had just gone to Tazewell county to attend to a lawsuit.

Lincoln accepted the challenge, and the weapons selected were broadswords, and Udo Abe knew well how to use them, having been thoroughly drilled by Maj. Duncan, a brother-in-law of Maj. Lucas. The field selected for the combat was near Alton, and the combatants proceeded. But Lincoln got wind, and reached the ears of Gen. Hardin, who immediately sent a party, reaching the scene just as the preliminaries were being arranged. He interposed, saying, "This is all nonsense," and succeeded in stopping the whole proceeding. Maj. Lucas says he saddled a horse, and got to the field about the same time. When Lincoln was in dead earnest in the matter?

"Oh, yes," said the Major, "Lincoln was not to fight. He was no coward, and he would unquestionably have held his own against his antagonist, for he was a powerful man in those days, and was well skilled in the use of the broadsword. He said to me after the affair was over, 'I could have split him in two.'"

JOHN BROWN'S FORTRESS.

The walls of the old engine-house at Brown's Ferry, where John Brown made his last stand with a dozen men against 7,000," says a correspondent, "furnish an artistic background to the placard setting forth the virtues of somebody's liver pad. The inscription on the front of the building, which is the story of Brown's crusade, cannot be read at any distance. The advertisement of the liver pad is in letters as large as a Springfield musket. The placard grows rank in front of the historic spot as though few pilgrims feet visited it. A clump of tall rag weed stands in the open doorway where young Watson Brown and his brother were shot down. Brown has gone, the windows have been boarded up and there is an air of neglect and gradual decay about the spot. It accords well with the stagnation of the town."

FOOT-KISSING.

In Theophile Gautier's "Constantinople of To-day," there is an account of the ceremony of kissing the Sultan's toe, an honor which is reserved for the Amir, Ministers and certain privileged Pashas. This act of homage is performed with the utmost solemnity, and is marked by every sign of respect worthy of so important an occasion. Referring to the custom of kissing the Pope's toe, Matthew of Westminster, thus explains its origin: Formerly it was usual to kiss the hand of his Holiness, but toward the close of the eighth century a certain woman, when making an offering to the Pope, not only kissed his hand, but committed the terrible outrage of squeezing it. The Pope, seeing the danger to which he was thus exposed, cut off his hand, and by this means escaped the contamination to which he had been rendered liable. Since that time the precaution has been taken of kissing the Pope's toe instead of his hand; and, lest any one should doubt the accuracy of this account, the historian argues that the hand, which had been cut off 500 or 600 years before, still existed at Rome—a standing miracle, since it was preserved in its original state, free from corruption. When the ceremony of kissing the Pope's toe takes place, he wears on the occasion a slipper with a cross. We may note here that kissing the foot is a common Oriental sign of respect, and is said to have been introduced into the West by the latter Roman Emperors, whose court ceremonies were mixed with so many servile customs.—Bellevue.

PALESTINE AMONG THE VETERANS.

We were surprised at the number of veterans who saw in attendance at the annual reunion, who were more or less afflicted with paralysis. Upon inquiry among those present we were still more astonished to learn that many of the veterans of the adjacent counties were confined at home with the same affliction—too feeble to be in attendance. We made diligent inquiry, and have become well satisfied that the mortality and suffering from paralysis among Tennessee veterans of the Mexican war is at this time much greater than among the men of the same age of any other period. This presents grave questions which are in the interest of science and of general humanity, and of special importance to the veterans of that war—perhaps the veterans of all wars. Among other questions we present these: First, is the tendency to paralysis among the veterans of the Mexican war in Tennessee greater than among other citizens of the State of the same age and of similar habits? Second, does such tendency extend to the veterans of that war in any other or in all other localities? Third, what are the causes which have produced that tendency? and do they still exist? Fourth, what can the veteran do in the way of diet, habit, or medicine, to avoid this tendency or palliate its consequences? Many other questions will present themselves to the scientific inquirer, which, we hope, will receive the attention which the importance of the subject claims. We raise these questions in general, but of the veterans of the Mexican war in particular. We think they open a wide field of investigation, which we hope some adventurous man of sense will explore.—Nashville (Tenn.) Work.
